Google rolls out video service to new countries

2006.07.12

Internet search giant Google is rolling out eight country-specific versions of its video-sharing community website, Google Video, to widen its appeal and compete with runaway market leaders YouTube and myspace.

Google Video, which has so far existed solely as a US-based site, will today roll out targeted services for the UK, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Poland, Spain and Canada.

Microsoft Patches 18 Security Flaws in Windows and Office

2006.07.12

Microsoft Corp. today released seven security updates to address 18 separate flaws in its Windows operating systems and Office software, including 13 problems that earned a "critical" severity rating, the company's most dire. Three of the patches mend flaws in Microsoft Office, including eight specific to Microsoft Excel. As Security Fix noted in recent posts, software blueprints showing would-be attackers just how to exploit two of these Excel flaws are already available online.

Microsoft faces second WGA lawsuit

2006.07.07

Microsoft has been named in a second lawsuit over its antipiracy Windows Genuine Advantage program, which plaintiffs allege acts as "spyware" on their systems. Engineered Process Controls, Univex and several other parties filed a class action lawsuit Friday in U.S. District Court in Seattle, alleging Microsoft installed "spyware" on their computers as a "critical security update." The suit comes days after another complaint containing similar allegations was filed in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles.

Cuebot-K IM (a worm) poses as WGA

2006.07.04

Security experts have warned of a worm that poses as the Microsoft's Windows Genuine Advantage (WGA) anti-piracy tool. WGA has only just been branded Spyware, in that it collects unnecessary hardware and software data from users' PCs. The Cuebot-K worm spreads via AOL Instant Messenger (AIM), registering itself as a new system driver service called 'wgavn'. It carries the display name 'Windows Genuine Advantage Validation Notification', and runs automatically during system startup.

Microsoft faces second class-action spyware lawsuit

2006.07.04

A second class-action lawsuit filed in less than a week against Microsoft alleges that a central pillar of the company's anti-piracy effort — installed automatically on millions of computers — amounts to spyware.

Microsoft denies WGA will ever kill machines

2006.07.03

Software giant Microsoft has officially denied that it will switch off the machines of punters that refuse to install its super soaraway , Windows Genuine Advantage (WGA).

"Microsoft antipiracy technologies cannot and will not turn off your computer," a spokesVole squeaked. However she indicated that Windows Vista operating system, will force companies to activate their software differently in a bid to sink pirates.
